REFUNDING FRENCH DEBT OF FOUR BILLION, TOPIC

AMERICA WELCOMES ANY DEFINITE REFUNDING OFFER

UNWILLING TO LINK SETTLEMENT WITH GERMAN REPARATIONS

(By United Press)
Washington, May 11.—Debt negotiations between France and the United States have been resumed following informal discussion regarding refunding of the French debt of four billion dollars, conducted by Ambassador Herrick and Finance Minister Caillaux. The state department requested Herrick to inform France that it will welcome any definite refunding offer, but is unwilling to link its settlement with German reparation payment to France, it was learned today.

This government is also pushing for a settlement of other foreign debts, but the situation was reported today as discouraging except in the case of Estonia's $17,000,000 relief debt.

Minister Pliip of Estonia, after arranging a tentative debt funding settlement with Secretary Mellon has just addressed a communication to his government and is now awaiting results.

American Minister Jay has left Bucharest, it was learned today without exacting from the Roumanian government a satisfactory answer to the sharp American note insisting on immediate funding of Roumania's $45,000,000 relief debt since she has already funded several similar debts to other powers.

ESTATE TAX ON POLICIES OF LIFE INSURANCE

CLAUSE OF 1918 FEDERAL ESTATE TAX LAW HELD CONSTITUTIONAL

FRICK INSURANCE TAKEN OUT BEFORE LAW BECAME EFFECTIVE

(By United Press)
Washington, May 11.—The clause of 1918 federal estate tax law levying against life insurance benefits was declared constitutional by the United States supreme court today. Lower court decisions that the executor of the estate of the late Henry Frick of Pennsylvania need not pay an assessment of $108,000 on $434,000 worth of life insurance left by him to his wife and daughter were affirmed by the higher tribunal. However, the opinion read by Justice Holmes said the clause applied only to policies taken out after the law went into effect. Frick's was taken out before the law became effective. The executors of the $97,000,000 Frick estate maintained that the life insurance was not part of the estate as it was paid directly to the wife and daughter. The lower court held the taxation was direct and not an excise tax and, therefore, unconstitutional.

SHORT ELECTION BALLOT IN MILL CITY

(By United Press)
Minneapolis, May 11.—Residents of Minneapolis, voting in the primary election today, for the first time in several years are not called upon to decide proposed bond issues or amendments to the city charter. The ballot used today is the shortest for the past several elections.

Because of the act passed by the last legislature amending the permanent registration law, each voter is required to sign a blank form in the presence of a judge for comparison with the signatures on the registration cards. If the two signatures differ the voter may be challenged, according to the ruling.

Voters of but three legislative districts will be forced to select candidates for the general election in June. Every other district has but two candidates in the field. But nine checks are necessary on today's ballot, one for mayor, one for city comptroller, three for judges, one for park commissioner, one for alderman, and two for school director.

Ignorance of New Law Invalidates High School Election Held in Crookston

Crookston, Minn., May 11.—Lack of knowledge of a law enacted by the Minnesota legislature last February is held responsible for invalidating the school election held in Crookston on April 25, at which an issue of $75,000 bonds was voted to build an auditorium and gymnasium on the grounds of the Crookston high school.

The election was held at the high school building as provided under the old law governing such elections. It has been discovered that a law passed on February 5, last, provides that such election is required to be in the same manner as general elections are held, that is having polling places in the different wards.

Some of the school board members are said to be in favor of calling a new election at once, while others believe it would be advisable to let the matter rest as it is, for the present at least.

The cross bill charges Mrs. Dilg with flirtations previous to the first divorce and "scratching, biting and kicking" following the reunion.

Ignorance of New Law Invalidates High School Election Held in Crookston

Crookston, Minn., May 11.—Lack of knowledge of a law enacted by the Minnesota legislature last February is held responsible for invalidating the school election held in Crookston on April 25, at which an issue of $75,000 bonds was voted to build an auditorium and gymnasium on the grounds of the Crookston high school.

The election was held at the high school building as provided under the old law governing such elections. It has been discovered that a law passed on February 5, last, provides that such election is required to be in the same manner as general elections are held, that is having polling places in the different wards.

Some of the school board members are said to be in favor of calling a new election at once, while others believe it would be advisable to let the matter rest as it is, for the present at least.

DILG WILL FIGHT SUIT BY WIFE FOR DIVORCE

Chicago, May 11.—Will H. Dilg, president of the Izaak Walton League of America, is determined to fight the divorce suit brought by his wife last March. Dilg filed a cross bill Friday. The purpose of the cross action, according to Dilg's attorney, Charles S. Wharton, is to gain custody of Frances Ann, 5-year-old daughter, and to prevent rumored impending marriage between Mrs. Dilg and a New York man.

The Dilgs were first divorced in 1914. Mrs. Dilg married immediately after, but with her former husband's help had the marriage annulled. They were re-married in 1915.

The cross bill charges Mrs. Dilg with flirtations previous to the first divorce and "scratching, biting and kicking" following the reunion.

ARMS MANUFACTURING NATION, EXPORTING ARMS, DISCUSSED

BRITISH AND FRENCH DELEGATES SPEAK ON THE QUESTION

(By United Press)
Geneva, May 11.—The League of Nations Arms Traffic conference continued discussion of the principle which it will endeavor to codify into a future convention.

The British and French delegates spoke on this question, urging prudence in the discussion, saying it apparently lay outside of the scope of the present conference. The conference will be continued tomorrow.

New Air-Cooled Motor Developed for U. S. Navy
Called Greatest Advance in Aviation Since War

The Cyclone or P-1 type of motor, developed exclusively for the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, was photographed at the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, D. C., where it was to be tried out officially. It is a radial motor of nine cylinders developing 450 horse-power and resembles the rotary motors used in pursuit planes during the war.

Where Credit Is Due

The horse sense that prevented wrecks in the old days probably belonged to the horse.—Bellingham Herald and Revelle.

HUPMOBILE EIGHT
MOTOR SHOWS NO
TEST VIBRATIONS

A cigarette doesn't weigh very much.

Stand it up on end and the slightest jar will upset it.

So when the Lively Auto Co. were looking for a suitable object to test the smoothness of the Hupmobile eight engine they selected a cigarette and placed it on the fender of a new eight sedan car. The engine was then started and run at varying speeds from idling to wide open throttle—the equivalent of 70 miles an hour.

"Throughout the engine's entire speed range the cigarette remained upright. Were there any engine vibration it surely would be so magnified in transmission to the fenders that no such object as a cigarette would remain there a moment," said George Sweet, general manager, Brainerd Gas and Electric, who was an interested spectator while this test was being made on his new Hup 8 sedan. This result was not unexpected, however, as during the block-testing of the motor before production started, another more difficult test was made by standing a penny upright on the cylinder head and running the engine wide open. Despite the different speeds at which the engine was turned over the penny didn't quiver a bit. It stood on end just as quietly as when the engine wasn't running at all.

A number of other engine demonstrations, showing that the new eight power plant is entirely free from vibration and runs just as smoothly at top speed as when operating at ordinary driving ranges.

In commenting on what he termed "most remarkable exhibitions," Mr. Hutchinson general sales manager Hup corporation added:

"When Hupmobile was making plans to build this eight the engineers were instructed to produce an engine that would be entirely free from vibration. They have been singularly successful. I have witnessed many different methods of demonstrating the smoothness of an automobile engine—but never before have I heard of a cigarette used. And it is twice as effective because it is so much lighter. The slightest jar will upset it.

"If you don't believe it try it on the fender of your own car."

VERDICT IN STILLINGS CASE

Jury, in Her Damage Suit Against the City, Awards Her
$350

Mrs. Mary Stillings, in her damage suit against the city of Brainerd, was awarded $350, the jury returning its verdict in her favor at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Frank Carter was foreman of the jury.

The case on trial Monday afternoon is that of the Unique Illustrating Company against A. Mark, a suit to recover on advertising which the plaintiff alleges was furnished to the defendant. Swanson & Swanson are attorneys for the illustrating company, and Murphy & Cook of Crosby represent Mr. Mark, who is a former business man of Brainerd, now located in Crosby.

The jury in this case is composed of Mrs. Kate O'Connor, P. A. Anderson, Mrs. Walter Butka, Mrs. C. A. Russell, Mrs. A. M. Opsahl, Mrs. H. E. Scott, Cora Kramer, Lester W. Bratt, L. B. Bentley, Vernon Lambert, Mrs. L. Peterson and W. A. Clark.

Blakeny, Thomas Blackburn, Roy Crowell, Mrs. W. A. Erickson, M. J. Reis, J. M. Lambert, A. H. Proctor, Henry Tabert, J. Hebert, Victor Anderson, Martin Johnson, Ben Jenkins, Roy Cook, Edward Crust, Mrs. C. G. Nordin, W. H. Calkins, D. H. Fullerton and O. H. Johnson. Mrs. Nordin, Fred Hamdorf and W. H. Cleary were excused from service.

Minneapolis, May 11.—Minneapolis Rotary club members replied with hisses Friday to a plea for support of American recognition of soviet Russia.

He was applauded repeatedly, however, when he suggested steps for church relief in Russia.

The conference, held in the Hennepin Avenue M. E. church, Minneapolis, will end today.

Buffalo was selected for next year's conference city.

Indian Walk Ousts White Man's Gait When Foot Troubles Are Discovered Largely Due To "Toes Out" Fallacy

"White man poor since don't know how to walk." The old Indian chief on his first visit to the city was right, in the opinion of orthopedic specialists. Whatever the advantages of civilization it has not benefited man's feet.

The Indian uses his foot as sort of rudder, the big toe always pointing straight ahead. He wears soft, pliable foot covering and never suffers from flatfoot, corns, callouses or blisters, no matter what distance he walks. The city man would do well to follow his example in the matter of foot position and the general idea of foot covering so far as feasible.

"Toes out" was the fallacy fostered by the white man until comparatively recent years. It was finally and irrevocably exploded by the war experience.

The conservation of foot power is a real problem in the big industrial organization as a great part of the force must of necessity be on its feet several hours of the day. At the Prudential Insurance Company, in Newark, N. J., the girls and young men who enter the employ of the company as messengers and filing clerks are carefully watched for signs of fatigue which might result from being almost continually on their feet.

By reaching these young people in the first stages of their foot discomfort, Dr. Charles W. Crankshaw, director of the Prudential Infirmary, feels that he can save them from future serious trouble and conserve their energy and efficiency. As soon as the question of proper foot covering is dismissed he explains to them from the practical side of the question, something of the anatomy of the leg and foot. Then begins the process of teaching them to walk—to walk without tiring.

The preliminary exercise is learning first to stand, then to walk, on the ball of the foot and the toes. This exercises and strengthens the muscles and tendons of the foot, leg and thigh.

Proper foot position is insisted upon and an exercise to counteract the "toeing out" evil consists of walking with the weight well on the outside of the foot, the toes pointed well inward.

An exercise that was found most helpful in overcoming flatfoot tendencies of recruits in the World War was having them walk along an inverted trough. This threw the weight on the outside of the foot and strengthened the muscles of the foot, leg and thigh.

"And the best exercise of all is proper dancing," said Dr. Crankshaw. "The gentle rising to and from necessitates a nice balance and gives exercise to those muscles which are neglected in the too common habit of walking by first striking hard on the heels."

RAILROAD-HIGHWAY GRADE CROSSING PROTECTION OFFERED

The Railroad and Warehouse Commission is given much greater authority over the protection of railroad-highway grade crossings, by the passage by the Legislature of 1925 of Chapter 336. This Act, approved April 24, 1925, in brief provides:

1. For the adoption by the Commission of uniform warning signs, three distinct types of such signs being provided for, which will afford a much greater protection to the traveling public than that heretofore provided.

2. For the inspection of all highway grade crossings in the State by the Railroad and Warehouse Commission, with a view to ascertaining where the conditions require more adequate protection.

3. For the installation of watchmen or crossing gates at crossings where the same are deemed necessary, and for the operation of such gates continuously during the 24 hours of the day.

4. For the vacation or re-location of grade crossings.

5. For the stopping at grade crossings by the drivers of vehicles transporting school children, or by vehicles carrying passengers for hire, or by truck and tractors, etc., before passing over the same.

6. That all traffic shall stop at grade crossings where a "Stop" sign is provided, before passing over the same.

7. That all traffic not required to come to a full stop before passing over a grade crossing, shall pass over the same at not to exceed ten miles per hour. This provision is effective where a "Stop" sign is not provided.

8. That no advertising sign or other sign similar in character to grade crossing warning signs, shall be erected or maintained upon, over or adjacent to any public highway in the State of Minnesota.

9. Providing heavy penalties for the defacement, destruction or malicious injurying of highway crossing warning signs.

10. Providing fines of $25 to $100 or imprisonment in the county jail for not more than three months for a violation of any of the provisions of the law.

As a safety measure to life and property, the passage of this law is a great step towards the curtailment or wiping out of the large number of railroad grade crossing accidents, and the Railroad and Warehouse Commission shall greatly appreciate the hearty cooperation of the traveling public to this end.

WATER LEVELS IMPORTANT IN LAKE REGION

ALONG with our tourist trade, comes extension of good roads, preservation and propagation of fish and game, forestry, etc., as well as preservation of our lake levels.

Congressman Harold Knutson early became interested in lake levels and has continued his work. In a recent letter to A. M. Opsahl, who helped to crystallize sentiment and called meetings on this subject, assembling data, in which he was joined by Leon E. Lum and others, Congressman Knutson writes:

"I have just returned from a very interesting interview with General Taylor, Chief of Engineers, U. S. A., with whom I discussed water levels in the reservoir system of the upper Mississippi and the disposition of such government owned lands bordering the reservoir as are not needed in the operation of the reservoir.

"I told General Taylor that we are in favor of legislation that will permit the State of Minnesota to regulate all water levels within her border, except in streams upon which there is actual navigation; in other words, everything except the Mississippi river below St. Paul. He stated that within the next two or three months he hopes to receive the report of the Engineers who have been making a survey of the Mississippi below St. Paul with the view of putting in two dams between that city and Lake Pepin, and in the event a favorable recommendation is made (and he thought the report would be favorable) he would favor turning reservoir dams over to the control of the State of Minnesota, as he stated that there would be no further need for the reservoir system, as the water levels for navigation on the Mississippi should be regulated by the two dams above referred to. If the proposition to put in the two dams is approved, and the necessary money is appropriated by Congress, the entire reservoir system could be placed under the control of the State of Minnesota and that would solve the low water levels that are now complained of.

"As a general proposition General Taylor would favor disposing of government owned lands within the reservoir system that are not actually needed by the government in the operation of the dams, but he told me that he preferred to not take any action with reference to the disposition of these lands until the Engineers' reports had been received. At that time I expect to take the matter up with him again and press it to a definite conclusion.

"As a result of my talk with General Taylor I feel that we are nearer a solution of our troubles than we have been at any time since I first took this matter up, and you may be assured that I will continue to give it my very best attention.

Animals That Possess

Keen Sense of Humor

Animals vary greatly in disposition. Some are kindly, some cross; some are naturally sad and solemn, others are merry and light-hearted.

You could not possibly imagine a sloth snuggling in a bullock indulging in a practical joke, but some monkeys, most parrots, and such birds as the jackdaw and magpie have a distinct if crude sense of humor.

The writer has seen a parrot whistle up a dog, imitating the call made by its master. When the dog arrived the parrot went off into a peal of laughter and the hoaxed animal slunk away with its tail between its legs. This used to happen almost every day.

Another parrot once succeeded in making a trainload of people believe that they had run over a child. Sudden cries followed by low moaning rang out from beneath the wheels.

A monkey aboard ship used to amuse itself in the cook's absence by turning on the water taps in order to enjoy the cook's fury when he found the water running all over the floor.

A monkey in the London zoo tried the experiment of tying together in a knot the tails of two smaller monkeys, and there was a real grin on his face as he joyfully watched the entertainment they provided.

Seals are playful; walrus are very solemn. An elephant has a sly sense of humor, but a rhinoceros is stupid. It is odd, too, that while monkeys have a strong sense of humor, apes have none.

Remarking that bank clerks are accustomed to fingering dirty treasury notes, Sir Robert Kindersley, the president of the National Savings organization and a director of the Bank of England, said occasionally a customer goes to the opposite extreme.

A case in point was that of an elderly lady who paid into her bank a number of bundles of notes that, although not new, were of immaculate appearance.

To the cashier's complimentary allusion to their daintiness, the customer's reply was:

"And so they ought to look nice, being that I was up till 1 o'clock this morning cleaning and ironing them!"—Pittsburgh Post.

Candles as Auctioneers

The ancient custom of "selling by candle" is not dead in this country, although it is rare. At Warton the grazing rights upon the roadside are let annually by this means, and at Aldermaston the "church acre," a piece of meadow left to the church many years ago, is let every three years in similar fashion.

A candle is lighted; one inch below the flame is measured off and a pin stuck in at that point. The bidding begins and the one who bids as the gin falls is the winner. ## WATER LEVELS IMPORTANT IN LAKE REGION

ALONG with our tourist trade, comes extension of good roads, preservation and propagation of fish and game, forestry, etc., as well as preservation of our lake levels.

Congressman Harold Knutson early became interested in lake levels and has continued his work. In a recent letter to A. M. Opsahl, who helped to crystallize sentiment and called meetings on this subject, assembling data, in which he was joined by Leon E. Lum and others, Congressman Knutson writes:

"I have just returned from a very interesting interview with General Taylor, Chief of Engineers, U. S. A., with whom I discussed water levels in the reservoir system of the upper Mississippi and the disposition of such government owned lands bordering the reservoir as are not needed in the operation of the reservoir.

"I told General Taylor that we are in favor of legislation that will permit the State of Minnesota to regulate all water levels within her border, except in streams upon which there is actual navigation; in other words, everything except the Mississippi river below St. Paul. He stated that within the next two or three months he hopes to receive the report of the Engineers who have been making a survey of the Mississippi below St. Paul with the view of putting in two dams between that city and Lake Pepin, and in the event a favorable recommendation is made (and he thought the report would be favorable) he would favor turning reservoir dams over to the control of the State of Minnesota, as he stated that there would be no further need for the reservoir system, as the water levels for navigation on the Mississippi should be regulated by the two dams above referred to. If the proposition to put in the two dams is approved, and the necessary money is appropriated by Congress, the entire reservoir system could be placed under the control of the State of Minnesota and that would solve the low water levels that are now complained of.

"As a general proposition General Taylor would favor disposing of government owned lands within the reservoir system that are not actually needed by the government in the operation of the dams, but he told me that he preferred to not take any action with reference to the disposition of these lands until the Engineers' reports had been received. At that time I expect to take the matter up with him again and press it to a definite conclusion.

"As a result of my talk with General Taylor I feel that we are nearer a solution of our troubles than we have been at any time since I first took this matter up, and you may be assured that I will continue to give it my very best attention.

Dread of Darkness*Hard to Eradicate

Why is it that, no matter how long we live, we never outgrow our terror in the dark? Why is it that so many thousands of persons wake up suddenly at 2:45 a. m. and are struck with the swiftness and unexpectedness of a blow by some worry, some regret, some remorse, some neglected duty? Why is it that these things torment our minds in the long watches of the night and dwindle to insignificance with the rising sun? asks William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's Magazine.

Of all forms of religion except Christianity, the worship of the sun seems to me most reasonable. I have been a sun lover from my earliest recollection. The best thing said about heaven in the Bible is that there is no night there. I am a child of the morning. To use another Biblical phrase, I have often said, "Would God it were morning!" but never in my life have I said, "Would God it were evening!"

When I was a boy I saw a picture of a woman carrying her baby in a room dimly lit by half light. I remember how ardently I hoped the dimness was caused by the dawn and not by the evening.

One Time Roosevelt*Laid Aside Big Stick

When Roosevelt was President he was walking to church one Sunday morning and saw a kitten on the sidewalk trying to escape from two terriers. In writing to his daughter, Ethel, about it, he said: "I bonched forward with my umbrella and after some active work captured the kitten." He then inquired of the people on the neighboring porches as to the ownership. Nobody knew about it. The President saw it was not accustomed to taking care of itself and he did not want to expose it to danger by putting it down. So he marched along half a block carrying it in his arms. Then he saw a woman and her little girl were looking out of the window. He walked up the steps and asked them if they did not want the kitten. They were greatly pleased to accept it. Whether they realized that the President of the United States had brought it to them, we do not know.—The Wellspring.

Elephantine Hailstone

We read now and again of record hailstorms even in this country, and we hear hailstones compared in size with marbles, pigeons' eggs, and so on. There are many fairly well authenticated cases of hailstones weighing half a pound or more, but claims much in excess of these are made. Stones of six or eight pounds were said to have fallen at Namur in 1719, and the missionary, Father Hue, records the fall in Tartary, in 1843, of a block of ice as big as a millstone, which took three days to melt.

In May, 1802, a Hungarian village reported the fall of a block of ice 1,100 pounds in weight; while in the time of Tipoo, a Sultan of Mysore, one as big "as an elephant"—a Jumbo of a stone—is said to have fallen near Seringapatam.

Personal Responsibility

If we suddenly plant our foot and say—I will neither eat nor drink nor wear nor touch any food or fabric which I do not know to be innocent, or deal with any person whose whole manner of life is not clear and rational, we shall stand still. Whose is so? Not mine! not thine; not his. But I think we must clear ourselves each one by the interrogation, whether we have earned our bread today by the hearty contribution of our energies to the common benefits; and we must not cease to tend to the correction of flagrant wrongs, by laying one stone aright every day.—Emerson.

Day Notable in History

The Ninth Thermidor of the year 11, in the French Revolutionary calendar, corresponds to July 27, 1794. It is historically memorable as the day on which the national convention deposed Robespierre, and thus put an end to the Reign of Terror. On the following day the tyrant and 22 of his partisans were guillotined.

It is said that the following epitaph for Robespierre was written by one who understood his character: "Passer-by, lament not for Robespierre; for, were he living, thou wouldst be dead."—Kansas City Times.

When Railroad Was New

A bold sportsman who lived in England a hundred years ago when the railway was new accepted an invitation to go with a house party for a run of five miles by rail. In a letter written in 1829 he gives this account of his experience: "The quickest motion is to me frightful; it is really flying, and it is impossible to divest yourself of the notion of instant death to all upon the least accident's happening. It gave me a headache that has not left me yet." The train in which he rode "flew" at the terrific speed of 23 miles an hour.—Exchange.

Dog Dye

Prince has always sported a beard that would draw envious glances from a Russian grand duke. Sleek and glossy, its shiny black has given to his facial make-up a leading place among the dogs of Northboro. Prince followed his master to a chemical and dye company's plant and came back with a glow of pride in his eyes and pink whiskers on his chin. It is believed that the dog, in a moment of curiosity, nosed into a vat of pink dye.—New York World.

New Vegetable Types Best

Add interest to your garden this year by growing a new vegetable—one new to you if it isn't a new introduction. Seedsmen are constantly improving and adding to their lists of vegetable seeds and it is not wise to cling to old-time sorts when you can have much better ones both in quality and productiveness at a slight increase per packet of seed and often for no increase at all.

Try some of the new giant-podded dwarf peas that the English growers have developed. There are new spinaches which do not race up to seed before you can get them picked. Try one of the new Danish types and you will learn what real spinach is. The huge leaves which have marked the market supplies all winter and which have aroused much favorable comment, are of this type.

Try a tomato new to you. There are tomatoes and tomatoes, many of them mere distinctions as to name without much actual difference in tomato, but one tomato will do better in one section than it does in another, and it pays to experiment until you find the one best suited to your garden patch.

Try some of the new Golden Bantam hybrid sweetcorns which carry the gold and sugar of the little Bantam into bigger cobs and later yield. In general, when ordering a vegetable seed it is always best to buy the selected and special strain of your favorite seedsmen.

Cajuns of Louisiana

Fond of Old Customs

The Cajun of southwestern Louisiana has his own particular customs, some of them handed down by his Nova Scotian ancestors, others of more modern invention.

Often in naming his numerous children, he will stick to a single letter. Thus, in a family that has chosen the letter "O," the boys may be Odion, Oliver, Octave, Ovide, Optah, Otis, Oto; the girls Octavie, Odellia, Ophelia, Odile, Olive, Ollia, Olympe, Omeah. This system, though pleasantly alliterative, must result sometimes in confusion.

As inevitable as his cup of black coffee, is the Cajun's use of brick dust. This, pounded small, is scattered inside, and especially upon that shelflike portion of his home which, however small, he calls a gallery. In its way it is ornamental, the dull red of the dust standing out against the dark weathered gray of the unpainted plank behind.

In the better class families the French proprieties are observed, the young folk addressing their elders with the formal "you" rather than the familiar "thou." Religious duties are seldom neglected. Saturday night balls, which last through until day-break, are ended by the dancers attending mass in a body.—Adventure Magazine.

Wood as Polisher

An interesting use of rotten wood is in the polishing of the fine parts of the highest grade Swiss and French watches. Formerly this material was more extensively employed than at present, being largely supplanted by machinery and benzine. The escape parts and small screws are still in large part polished by hand and rotten wood. The value of the rotten wood used annually in Switzerland for this purpose is about $4,000, the best quality bringing a price of $1 a pound. What is wanted is a yellowish white silky material, soft and spongy, in which the growth rings are still visible.—J. S. Record, in American Forests and Forest Life.

Tomato Not Long Popular

Tomatoes were probably first grown in the Sixteenth century in Peru. They were grown in an ancient time in Mexico, but they did not become an economic fruit until about 100 years ago. Up until that time (1830) they were grown for ornament and were called the love apple. It was not until about 1870 that decided steps were taken to improve the tomato commercially. A. W. Livingston, seedsmen in Columbus, Ohio, brought out the old variety known as Trophy. The tomato was grown as early as 1596 in England, mostly in hothouses, and as early as 1812 in Italy.

Wanted to Be Sure

Father had promised his small daughter that if she were very good she should go to a vaudeville theater in the evening on condition that she behaved nicely during the performance.

She maintained an unusually subdued manner all day, and just before starting for the theater inquired anxiously:

"If there should be a joke, would they mind if I laugh?"

Work or Starve!

careful study to keep these vegetables up to standard, so make the most of the work of the experts and do not take any old bean that you have been used to. Pick up-to-date special strains. This is the wise policy in any vegetable. All these seeds have to undergo severe tests before they are placed on the market.

Shopping by Phone

(By United Press)
Chicago, May 11.—Fifty per cent of the housewives of the United States still "hoof it" to the grocery store. The other 50 shop by phone. These figures were collected by the research committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Assn. The grocers want more housewife to use the phone. Ninety per cent is their aim.

While the grocers don't say so, they apparently believe that 10 per cent will everlastingly visit the stores and "pick over" the produce.

Had the Right Initial

An auditor, examining the rate-books in a rural district, not far from London, was puzzled to find the letter "H" against several names where the place of residence should be indicated. Upon being asked to explain, the assistant overseer said: "Oh, well, as a matter of fact, these particular people are dead, but not knowing for certain, I felt unable to give more than the initial letter of their present abode."

Viola Dana and Raymond Griffith in the Paramount Picture "Forty Winks"

"Forty Winks" Has Great Cast

Viola Dana, Theodore Roberts and Raymond Griffith are featured in the principal roles of the Paramount picture, "Forty Winks," which will be shown at the New Park on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The picture is an adaptation of David Belasco and Henry C. deMille's tremendously popular stage farce, "Lord Chumley," adapted to the screen by Bertram Millhauser and directed by Paul Iribe and Frank Urson. The production is a melodramatic mystery-comedy.

Roberts, who returned to the screen after an absence of a year in "Locked Doors," is cast as a retired admiral in "Forty Winks." "Admiral" Roberts fits right into his nautical role because for two and a half years in real life he was Captain Roberts, commanding a schooner plying out of San Francisco. Miss Dana plays his daughter, in love with Chumley, a titled English gentleman.

Reginald Denny Has Amusing Role in "Oh, Doctor" at Lyceum

Rufus Billups, Jr., had attained a little more than his majority before he took any real exercise—and then that exercise was vicarious, for it was taken while Rufus was dreaming that he was a faun and was gambling over the greensward in company of a beauteous nymph. Then Rufus awoke and he could really feel the tingling of muscle and flesh consequent upon his extraordinary unusual physical activity; also, as his dream came back to him he realized that the beauteous nymph was his beautiful nurse.

What resulted from this dream? Rufus is the beginning of the end of the hilariously humorous story told by "Oh, Doctor!" Universal-Jewel, starring Reginald Denny and being shown in the Lyceum Theatre last time tonight.

"Behold This Woman" Takes Audience Behind Scenes in Filmdom

will be shown at the Lyceum Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday.

A glimpse of life in Hollywood among the actors and players of screen fame will be shown in this dramatic story, which deals with the love of a young cattleman for a popular motion picture star. The picture is an adaptation of E. Phillip Oppenheim's novel and is produced by J. Stuart Blackton for Vitagraph. The story contrasts life in the open on a great ranch and the smart set of those who bask in the reflected glory of public favorites.

John Strangeway, who has lived a primitive life, meets Louise Maurer, a motion picture star. His brother, Stephen, with whom he lives, is a bitter woman-hater and frowns on the friendship of his younger brother and Louise. Fascinated by the actress, John goes to Hollywood, makes his way into the studio and bluntly informs Louise that he has come to marry her.

"Sackcloth and Scarlet"

The Henry King production,

"Sackcloth and Scarlet," a Paramount picture featuring Alice Terry which opened at the New Park on Sunday last, will close its run there today.

The story is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by George Gibbs. Dorothy Sebastian, formerly of the "Follies" and "Scandals" in New York City, and Orville Caldwell head the cast.

FIVE INJURED IN SERIES OF ACCIDENTS

(By United Press)
Minneapolis, May 11.—Five persons were injured in a series of accidents yesterday. Walter Grotte, 17, and Arvie Anderson, 12, are in critical conditions today from injuries received in the traffic crashes. Grotte was hurled headlong into a brick building from a skidding automobile, while Anderson was injured riding a bicycle.

Early English Kingdoms

Heptarchy was the name given to the seven principal kingdoms established by the Saxons in England at various times from the Fifth to the Ninth centuries. They were as follows: Essex, Sussex, Wessex, Kent, East Anglia, Mercia, and Northumbria. In 828 A. D. these various petty kingdoms were united under one government by Egbert, king of Wessex, who was from that time styled king of England. The word heptarchy means seven governments.—Kansas City Star.

Sturdy Cottons for the Small Boy

Just about the best outfit for the romping little boy of three or the kindergarten youngster are little pants-and-blouse suits. They are made of sturdy cottons or coarse linens, usually in tan, natural, brown, blue or green, and sometimes have white collars and sleevebands. Dread of Darkness*Hard to Eradicate

Why is it that, no matter how long we live, we never outgrow our terror in the dark? Why is it that so many thousands of persons wake up suddenly at 2:45 a. m. and are struck with the swiftness and unexpectedness of a blow by some worry, some regret, some remorse, some neglected duty? Why is it that these things torment our minds in the long watches of the night and dwindle to insignificance with the rising sun? asks William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's Magazine.

Of all forms of religion except Christianity, the worship of the sun seems to me most reasonable. I have been a sun lover from my earliest recollection. The best thing said about heaven in the Bible is that there is no night there. I am a child of the morning. To use another Biblical phrase, I have often said, "Would God it were morning!" but never in my life have I said, "Would God it were evening!"

When I was a boy I saw a picture of a woman carrying her baby in a room dimly illumined by half light. I remember how ardently I hoped the dimness was caused by the dawn and not by the evening.

One Time Roosevelt*Laid Aside Big Stick

When Roosevelt was President he was walking to church one Sunday morning and saw a kitten on the sidewalk trying to escape from two terriers. In writing to his daughter, Ethel, about it, he said: "I bonned forward with my umbrella and after some active work captured the kitten." He then inquired of the people on the neighboring porches as to the ownership. Nobody knew about it. The President saw it was not accustomed to taking care of itself and he did not want to expose it to danger by putting it down. So he marched along half a block carrying it in his arms. Then he saw a woman and her little girl were looking out of the window. He walked up the steps and asked them if they did not want the kitten. They were greatly pleased to accept it. Whether they realized that the President of the United States had brought it to them, we do not know.—The Wellspring.

Elephantine Hailstone

We read now and again of record hailstorms even in this country, and we hear hailstones compared in size with marbles, pigeons' eggs, and so on. There are many fairly well authenticated cases of hailstones weighing half a pound or more, but claims much in excess of these are made. Stones of six or eight pounds were said to have fallen at Namur in 1719, and the missionary, Father Hue, records the fall in Tartary, in 1843, of a block of ice as big as a millstone, which took three days to melt.

In May, 1892, a Hungarian village reported the fall of a block of ice 1,100 pounds in weight; while in the time of Tippoo, a Sultan of Mysore, one as big "as an elephant"—a Jumbo of a stone—is said to have fallen near Seringapatam.

Personal Responsibility

If we suddenly plant our foot and say—I will neither eat nor drink nor wear nor touch any food or fabric which I do not know to be innocent, or deal with any person whose whole manner of life is not clear and rational, we shall stand still. Whose is so? Not mine! not thine; not his. But I think we must clear ourselves each one by the interrogation, whether we have earned our bread today by the hearty contribution of our energies to the common benefits; and we must not cease to tend to the correction of flagrant wrongs, by laying one stone aright every day.—Emerson.

Day Notable in History

The Ninth Thermidor of the year 11, in the French Revolutionary calendar, corresponds to July 27, 1794. It is historically memorable as the day on which the national convention deposed Robespierre, and thus put an end to the Reign of Terror. On the following day the tyrant and 22 of his partisans were guillotined.

It is said that the following epitaph for Robespierre was written by one who understood his character: "Passer-by, lament not for Robespierre; for, were he living, thou wouldst be dead."—Kansas City Times.

When Railroad Was New

A bold sportsman who lived in England a hundred years ago when the railway was new accepted an invitation to go with a house party for a run of five miles by rail. In a letter written in 1829 he gives this account of his experience: "The quickest motion is to me frightful; it is really flying, and it is impossible to divest yourself of the notion of instant death to all upon the least accident's happening. It gave me a headache that has not left me yet." The train in which he rode "flew" at the terrific speed of 23 miles an hour.—Exchange.

Dog Dye

Prince has always sported a beard that would draw envious glances from a Russian grand duke. Sleek and glossy, its shiny black has given to his facial make-up a leading place among the dogs of Northboro. Prince followed his master to a chemical and dye company's plant and came back with a glow of pride in his eyes and pink whiskers on his chin. It is believed that the dog, in a moment of curiosity, nosed into a vat of pink dye.—New York World.

Tad, a Creature of Impulse

By WALTER T. FIELD

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

HE WAS ten, but no one would have thought him as old. A mite of a boy, thin, sharp-featured, brown-eyed, with a tangle of dark hair that had seldom felt the influence of a comb or known the barber's shears. His name was Tad, and his father was a lobsterman up on the Maine coast.

One August afternoon, as he was pursuing a fiddler crab along the edge of the island beach, he looked up and spied Eunice Harring and a half-dozen of her girl friends in an old dory rowing away from the wharf toward the mainland. Tad was a creature of impulse, and when he saw the boat turned landward, he remembered that he had business over at the harbor. There was a jellyfish that he had shut up among the rocks the day before and he wanted to see how it was prospering. So, without a moment's hesitation, he swam out across the path of the dory, seized the prow, and climbed in.

"What are you doing?" cried Eunice. "We didn't invite you to ride with us." "I'm goin' over to see my jellyfish," said Tad, ignoring the latter part of the remark.

"But, Taddy dear, you're not properly dressed for a boat ride with young ladies."

"My name ain't 'Taddy dear', and I'm dressed all right—as much as I generally am. I've got to see my jellyfish."

Several of the others seconded Eunice's objections, and the Wilkens girl, who was usually somewhat perverse, threatened to push him off.

"Lemme alone or I'll splash water on you," said Tad.

As the girls were dressed in freshly laundered organdies and were on their way to an afternoon party at the hotel, it seemed the part of wisdom not to argue with Tad, so he had his way.

"I don't think you're very polite, but you may stay if you want to," said Eunice.

"But you mustn't follow us up to the hotel," added the Wilkens girl.

"You must think I'm fond of you," said Tad. "Y' ain't half as in'trin' as my jellyfish."

It was more than a mile to the mainland. When they neared the middle of the channel, Tad's practiced eye saw a storm coming in from the sea. It was one of those sudden squalls that often visit the Maine coast and almost without warning whip the sea into a fury and toss imprudent small craft upon the rocks.

"You better row back if you don't want to get wet," said Tad. "Look a' them clouds."

The girls were frightened. Beyond the island was a background of greenish yellow which was rapidly spreading upward, and covering the sky. Already the sound was dotted with whitecaps, and a chilly wind blew in from the open sea.

They turned the dory with difficulty, and began to row against the rising storm. Eunice and the Wilkens girl each took an oar, while Gladys, Eunice's younger sister, sat in the stern, steering as well as she knew how.

The wind was increasing every moment, and the waves now tossed the clumsy boat violently about, drenching the occupants with spray.

"You better let me take a hand," said Tad from the bow.

"You're not big enough to do any good," said Eunice, as she strained at her oar.

"Turn 'er around and row with the wind into the harbor," said Tad. "If you don't we'll get smashed on the rocks."

The girls now realized that the small boy knew something about boats. They tried to follow his advice, and turn the prow of the old dory toward the harbor's mouth, but as they were broadside to the storm, the dory lurched and the oar that Eunice was using went into the air. The frightened girl, in trying to recover herself, lost her hold upon it and it floated away.

They were now badly handicapped. The remaining oar was worn and unwieldy, and the Wilkens girl did not know how to manage it. Every moment the waves were increasing, and the wind was steadily driving the boat nearer the rocky mainland.

But Tad's small mind was working. Like a flash he leaped into the sea, and a few strokes brought him to the oar. He seized it and tried to swim back to the dory. Unfortunately, that was a much more difficult task than to capture it. The boat was now drifting away from him. Twice by vigorous swimming he almost reached it, and twice the great waves beat him back. Eunice collected herself sufficiently to grasp the oar while Tad seized the gunwale of the boat—and a moment later, in a cloud of spray, he was over the side and in the midst of the now thoroughly demoralized crew.

"Here!" he said, "gimme those oars. You dunno how to row. You can bale out the boat if you want."

They gave way to him, and he took the oars. Slowly he edged away from the danger and rounded the point, and within a quarter of an hour, the boat was safely in, and beached on the sand less than a hundred yards from the hotel.

"Oh, Taddy dear, you have saved our lives!" cried Eunice.

"I ain't 'Taddy dear', I tell you," said the boy. "If I didn't know any more 'bout rowin' 'n you do, I wouldn't go out again, 'thout havin' someon to take care o' me."

Strong Sense of Duty Made Sailor "Missing"

"Man overboard!" stories are usually gressome. Here is one told by Captain Willis, R. M., that affords a pleasant change. The warning was sounded and the ship stopped. Boats were lowered but though a long search was made there was nothing found. The question then arose: Who was the man? Many had seen him disappear, but no one could identify him. The captain was not at all pained. It seemed that the lowering of the flaps had not been properly supervised, and the officer in charge of quarter-deck was "getting socks."

"And all I can tell you," said the captain in conclusion, "is that the blood of that unfortunate man will rest on your head."

Meantime, the order "Hands muster by open list," was piped, and the crew fell in by divisions. But the mystery only deepened, for no one was missing.

At last, up the ladder appeared a scared-looking A. B., and addressing the officer of the watch, he said: "I think, sir, as 'ow the man overboard must 'ave been me. I went over with the flap, sir, but 'eld onto the securing chain, and climbed in again very soon, sir."

"But why didn't you say so?"

"Very sorry, sir, but, being in the lifeboat's crew, I had to go away to search for the man overboard."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Trainmen Earn Their Money in Madagascar

Tamatave, principal seaport of Madagascar, is connected with the capital, Antananarivo—or Tananarive, as the French call it—by a narrow-gauge railway, the trains departing three times a week. E. Alexander Po-gill writes in the Century Magazine.

It takes the mail train 16 hours to traverse these 225 miles, this being due in some measure to the steepness of the grade, for the capital is nearly a mile above sea level; but even more, I imagine, to the delays incurred in announcing the names of the stations.

How, I ask you, can a train make good running time if it has to wait for the conductor to enunciate such names as Ampantomaizina, Andavakim-menarana, Ankaramamadrikia, Ambotrandriamanitra? Were the employees of American lines required thus to overwork their vocal cords the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen would make a protest to the interstate commerce commission.

Freak Fruit Tree

In the Transvaal a remarkable tree has been grown as an experiment.

A lemon tree was lopped until only three branches remained. Upon one was grafted an orange, upon another a grapefruit, while the third was allowed to remain lemon, with the result that at this time of the year the tree is bearing oranges, grapefruit and a few lemons all at once!

In the early season oranges and lemon fruit are in possession. Later oranges and grapefruit hold sway, while at the end of summer the tree has specimens of each adorning its boughs, combined with the dark and paler green leaves belonging to the different fruits.

Reinhart, the Painter

Joachim Christian Reinhart, German etcher and painter, was born at Hof, in Bavaria in 1731 and studied under Oeser at Leipzig and under Klingel at Dresden, in Saxony. In 1789 he went to Rome, where he became a follower of the classicist German painters, Carstens and Koch. He devoted himself more particularly to landscape painting and to engraving. Examples of his landscapes are to be found at most German galleries, notably at Frankfurt, Munich, Leipzig and Gotha.

India's Plague of Rats

A former Indian official says that rats are one of the greatest curses of India. There are hundreds of millions of them, and they cannot be exterminated because of religious beliefs. The Hindu will harry the rat, but will not kill him; the Mohammedan, who does not object to killing, knows that without help he can do nothing. And so the evil continues. It is no exaggeration to say that, if the number of rats could be kept down to a reasonable figure, the wealth of India would be increased a fifth.—Youth's Companion.

Solomon's Wise Rule

Under the reign of Solomon Israel developed into a commercial nation. Foreign alliances which he made formed the basis of trading relations abroad. He joined in maritime commerce with the Phoenicians, and once in three years sent a fleet from his port at the head of the gulf of Akaba to trade with Ohol, presumably on the eastern coast of Arabia, and places on the way. These expeditions brought back gold and oriental riches and vastly expanded the royal coffers.

Washing Machines Popular

In the olden days the family laundry was done at the stony edge of a babbling brook.

Later, hardware stores brought the brook to the home through sales of pipe and pumps, and furnished a washboard and tub to do the laundry with.

In the last two years, we learn from Good Hardware, American homes have been supplied with over $150,000,000 worth of electric washing machines.

The hardware store was the third greatest distributor of these machines

To Waterproof Shellac

A shellac finish on furniture or woodwork can be made fairly waterproof by the application of two or three coats of banana "oil." The last coat of shellac must be sand-papered as smooth as possible, and the liquid applied generously with a soft brush such as is used for varnish, says Popular Science Monthly. Each coat should be sand-papered lightly. Shellac treated in this way dries with a dull finish, but can be brightened by the application of furniture wax.

To Redeem Mangled Bill

The redemption division of the Treasury department says that if a person has three-fifths of a bill it can be redeemed for full value. If he has less than three-fifths, but more than two-fifths, it will be redeemed for one-half value. It should be sent to the secretary of the treasury, attention of the redemption division, Washington.

Reassurance

"I wish you could assure me," said a nervous old lady, approaching the captain of an excursion boat, "that this vessel would be able to come safely through a storm." "Lady," proudly asserted the grizzled skipper, "this old craft has come safe through so many storms that half her timbers is unf'linted." — American Legion Weekly.

In "Dixie" Land

For the Greater Good of the Greater Number

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has grown great over a period of years, by supplying an insistent demand for the type of service which it is supremely able to render.

This Company, always alert to utilize the most advanced thought in the refining and marketing of petroleum products has kept its service at all times a step ahead.

"A definite scientific trend in business methods," says William Basset, "has developed during the last few years. To succeed permanently, an enterprise must move in harmony with this trend; to resist it is to insure ultimate failure."

The best business thought of today is scientific. This thought applies to industrial management, as well as to industrial production.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) maintains an unvarying standard in the goods it manufactures because it knows that by maintaining these standards a greater service can, and will, be rendered its patrons. Its selling prices are based on costs. This policy enables it to sell its standard, high-quality gasoline and oils at consistently low prices, and at the same time to pay adequate wages to its employees and a proper return to its stockholders.

Only by such well rounded skill in management can lasting service to society be rendered. Labor, capital, consumer demand and selling price are all inextricably interwoven. Not one of these factors can be ignored if an industrial organization is to remain in business.

At times these elements seem to be in conflict. Customers want lower prices, labor wants higher wages, stockholders want more return from their investment. But an organization efficiently co-ordinated as is the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) finds it possible to maintain an equitable balance, so that in the end it renders the greater good of the greater number.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) applies its ability in organization; in production; in handling capital; in management of labor and in all-around efficiency to the service of society. This Company has added vastly to the security, power, opportunity and comfort of life as we know it today. It has made possible the harnessing of millions of machines, and of hundreds of thousands of motors, to transform and improve every phase of human existence.

The Greatest Resource

If I were to name three most precious resources of life, I should say books, friends and nature; and the greatest of these, at least the most constant and always at hand, is nature. Nature we have always with us, an inexhaustible storehouse of that which moves the heart, appeals to the mind, and fires the imagination—health to the body, a stimulus to the intellect and joy to the soul. To the scientist nature is a storehouse of facts, laws, processes; to the painter she is a storehouse of pictures; to the poet she is a store of images, fancies, a source of inspiration; to the moralist she is a storehouse of precepts and parables; to all she may be a source of knowledge and joy.—John Burroughs.

First Gas Engine

The first practical gas engine was invented in 1800 by a Frenchman named Lenoir. In general outward appearance the machine resembled a single cylinder, horizontal steam engine and was double acting. Gas was drawn into the cylinder during the first half of the forward stroke and exploded by an electric spark just as the piston was beginning the second half of the stroke. The burned gases were forced out during the return stroke when an explosion was taking place on the other side of the piston. Since the gas was ignited without being compressed, the engine was very wasteful.—Los Angeles Times.

Sloth a Tree Creature

The sloth is a purely arboreal animal, with elongated fore limbs terminating in hook-like digits, never more than three in number, by means of which the sluggish creature clings to branches. The hind limbs terminate in similar hooks. The tail is rudimentary, head short and rounded, ears small, hair long and coarse. The color in natural habitat is greenish. Sloths appear rarely to quit trees. Their movements are slow and deliberate, and there is no power of leaping. The stomach is complex in keeping with the diet of vegetable matter. Only one young is produced at birth.

In the days of Shakespeare's famous heroine, buying and selling were contests of wits. In Venice, haggling and dickering were the vogue. Along the Rialto, sharp practice was the rule. ### Tad, a Creature of Impulse

By WALTER T. FIELD

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

HE WAS ten, but no one would have thought him as old. A mite of a boy, thin, sharp-featured, brown-eyed, with a tangle of dark hair that had seldom felt the influence of a comb or known the barber's shears. His name was Tad, and his father was a lobsterman up on the Maine coast.

One August afternoon, as he was pursuing a fiddler crab along the edge of the island beach, he looked up and spied Eunice Harrington and a half-dozen of her girl friends in an old dory rowing away from the wharf toward the mainland. Tad was a creature of impulse, and when he saw the boat turned landward, he remembered that he had business over at the harbor. There was a jellyfish that he had shut up among the rocks the day before and he wanted to see how it was prospering. So, without a moment's hesitation, he swam out across the path of the dory, seized the prow, and climbed in.

"What are you doing?" cried Eunice. "We didn't invite you to ride with us." "I'm goin' over to see my jellyfish," said Tad, ignoring the latter part of the remark.

"But, Taddy dear, you're not properly dressed for a boat ride with young ladies."

"My name ain't 'Taddy dear,' and I'm dressed all right—as much as I generally am. I've got to see my jellyfish."

Several of the others seconded Eunice's objections, and the Wilkens girl, who was usually somewhat perverse, threatened to push him off.

"Lemme alone or I'll splash water on you," said Tad.

As the girls were dressed in freshly laundered organdies and were on their way to an afternoon party at the hotel, it seemed the part of wisdom not to argue with Tad, so he had his way.

"I don't think you're very polite, but you may stay if you want to," said Eunice.

"But you mustn't follow us up to the hotel," added the Wilkens girl.

"You must think I'm fond of you," said Tad. "Y' ain't half as in'trist' as my jellyfish."

It was more than a mile to the mainland. When they neared the middle of the channel, Tad's practiced eye saw a storm coming in from the sea. It was one of those sudden squalls that often visit the Maine coast and almost without warning whip the sea into a fury and toss improvident small craft upon the rocks.

"You better row back if you don't want to get wet," said Tad. "Look at 'em clouds!"

The girls were frightened. Beyond the island was a background of greenish yellow which was rapidly spreading upward, and covering the sky. Already the sound was dotted with white-caps, and a chilly wind blew in from the open sea.

They turned the dory with difficulty, and began to row against the rising storm. Eunice and the Wilkens girl each took an oar, while Gladys, Eunice's younger sister, sat in the stern, steering as well as she knew how.

The wind was increasing every moment, and the waves now tossed the clumsy boat violently about, drenching the occupants with spray.

"You better let me take a hand," said Tad from the bow.

"You're not big enough to do any good," said Eunice, as she strained at her oar.

"Turn 'er around and row with the wind into the harbor," said Tad. "If you don't we'll get smashed on the rocks."

The girls now realized that the small boy knew something about boats. They tried to follow his advice, and turn the prow of the old dory toward the harbor's mouth, but as they were broadside to the storm, the dory lurched and the oar that Eunice was using went into the air. The frightened girl, in trying to recover herself, lost her hold upon it and it floated away.

They were now badly handicapped. The remaining oar was worn and unwieldy, and the Wilkens girl did not know how to manage it. Every moment the waves were increasing, and the wind was steadily driving the boat nearer the rocky mainland.

But Tad's small mind was working. Like a flash he leaped into the sea, and a few strokes brought him to the oar. He seized it and tried to swim back to the dory. Unfortunately, that was a much more difficult task than to capture it. The boat was now drifting away from him. Twice by vigorous swimming he almost reached it, and twice the great waves beat him back. Eunice collected herself sufficiently to grasp the oar while Tad seized the gunwale of the boat—and a moment later, in a cloud of spray, he was over the side and in the midst of the now thoroughly demoralized crew.

"Here!" he said, "gimme those oars. You dunno how to row. You can bale out the boat if you want."

They gave way to him, and he took the oars. Slowly he edged away from the danger and rounded the point, and within a quarter of an hour, the boat was safely in, and beached on the sand less than a hundred yards from the hotel.

"Oh, Taddy dear, you have saved our lives!" cried Eunice.

"I ain't 'Taddy dear,' I tell you," said the boy. "If I didn't know any more 'bout rowin' 'n you do, I wouldn't go out again. 'bout havin' someun to take care o' me."

Strong Sense of Duty Made Sailor "Missing"

"Man overboard!" stories are usually grousing. Here is one told by Captain Willis, R. M., that affords a pleasant change. The warning was sounded and the ship stopped. Boats were lowered but though a long search was made there was nothing found. The question then arose: Who was the man? Many had seen him disappear, but no one could identify him. The captain was not at all pleased. It seemed that the lowering of the flaps had not been properly supervised, and the officer in charge of quarter-deck was "getting socks."

"And all I can tell you," said the captain in conclusion, "is that the blood of that unfortunate man will rest on my head."

Meantime, the order "Hands muster by open list," was piped, and the crew fell in by divisions. But the mystery only deepened, for no one was missing.

At last, up the ladder appeared a scared-looking A. B., and addressing the officer of the watch, he said:

"I think, sir, as 'ow the man overboard must 'ave been me. I went over with the flap, sir, but 'eld onto the securing chain, and climbed in again very soon, sir."

"But why didn't you say so?"

RECEIVE CAR OF PYROTOL

Government Salvage Explosive Now
Being Delivered to Farmers
of County

USED FOR LAND CLEARING

Car Contained 20,000 Pounds,
Enough to Clear 1,000 Acres
of Land

County Agent E. G. Roth received another carload of pyrotol government salvage explosive, the second this spring, and is delivering it to the farmers in this county who placed their orders in advance, and who will use it for land clearing purposes. The car contained 20,000 pounds of pyrotol, sufficient to clear about 1,000 acres, which with a similar amount previously obtained, furnishes quite an extensive land clearing program for Crow Wing county this season.

Much of this land will be planted to alfalfa and clover this spring, excellent crops for the dairy farmer, and proof that this county is making rapid strides forward in the dairy industry.

Mr. Roth states that about 2,000 pounds of the shipment just received has not been allotted, and farmers who need more than they had at first anticipated, or who have not received any pyrotol, may supply their wants from this surplus. It will go rapidly and those who wish a supply should get in touch with the county agent at once.

RELIC OF OLD DAYS

Old Back Bar Taken Out at Garveys
Revealed Tom and
Jerry Sign

A relic of pre-Volsted days was unearthed Monday in remodeling the William Garvey restaurant, and brought back many memories to old timers in the city.

In taking out the back bar, which has stood for over twenty years, a small sign was found. This sign depicts a winter scene, snow-covered hills, a stream and an old water mill. Across the top of the sign are the words, "Tom and Jerry," and along the bottom, "Merry Xmas."

Mr. Garvey believes that this sign was used when his building housed the George West bar. A saloon was conducted in the building many years previous to Mr. West's ownership, and it is barely possible that the sign was used at that time.

The Garvey restaurant is undergoing many changes, and will present a fine appearance when completed. The new front of white enameled brick gives the building the atmosphere of a child's restaurant. The interior is also being newly equipped to conform to the outside appearance.

The old back bar has been taken out and a new fixture substituted. The lunch counter is being cut down and will carry a glass top. White porcelain-topped stools will be installed.

Plate glass mirrors will be hung around the room, and as a finishing touch the whole interior is to be repainted and decorated. The large tables formerly used have been cut down to accommodate four people, and new two-party tables will be placed along the wall.

In all, Mr. Garvey plans to have one of the brightest and best equipped restaurants in this section of the state. He will make a specialty this season of catering to the tourist trade, which he believes will be the greatest in the history of the Brainerd lake region.

New York Thirstiest City, English Novelist Declares

London, May 11.—"The thirstiest city in the world!" Sounds like a tall statement, doesn't it? But New York is the city of tall stories. And when I landed in New York I speedily discovered that the prohibition story is the tallest of them all!"

May Christie, the English novelist, writes this on her return from the United States.

"Now, I confess to a great affection for New York. Next to London it has the greatest charm for me of any city in the world. Where can one meet kinder people; and where does one receive a warmer welcome? If New Yorkers play hard, they work even harder, and there is scope and opportunity for everyone. A zip, too, and a mental status about New York are as embracing as its keen and sunny climate.

"But—the thirstiest city in the world! I'll say it is!"

RECEIVE CAR OF PYROTOL

Government Salvage Explosive Now
Being Delivered to Farmers
of County

USED FOR LAND CLEARING

Car Contained 20,000 Pounds,
Enough to Clear 1,000 Acres
of Land

County Agent E. G. Roth received another carload of pyrotol government salvage explosive, the second this spring, and is delivering it to the farmers in this county who place their orders in advance, and who will use it for land clearing purposes. The car contained 20,000 pounds of pyrotol, sufficient to clear about 1,000 acres, which with a similar amount previously obtained, furnishes quite an extensive land clearing program for Crow Wing county this season.

Much of this land will be planted to alfalfa and clover this spring, excellent crops for the dairy farmer, and proof that this county is making rapid strides forward in the dairy industry.

Mr. Roth states that about 2,000 pounds of the shipment just received has not been allotted, and farmers who need more than they had at first anticipated, or who have not received any pyrotol, may supply their wants from this surplus. It will go rapidly, and those who wish a supply should get in touch with the county agent at once.

RELIC OF OLD DAYS

Old Back Bar Taken Out at Garveys
Revealed Tom and
Jerry Sign

A relic of pre-Volstead days was unearthed Monday in remodeling the William Garvey restaurant, and brought back many memories to old timers in the city.

In taking out the back bar, which has stood for over twenty years, a small sign was found. This sign depicts a winter scene, snow-covered hills, a stream and an old water mill. Across the top of the sign are the words, "Tom and Jerry," and along the bottom, "Merry Xmas."

Mr. Garvey believes that this sign was used when his building housed the George West bar. A saloon was conducted in the building many years previous to Mr. West's ownership and it is barely possible that the sign was used at that time.

The Garvey restaurant is undergoing many changes, and will present a fine appearance when completed. The new front of white enameled brick gives the building the atmosphere of a child's restaurant. The interior is also being newly equipped to conform to the outside appearance.

The old back bar has been taken out and a new fixture substituted. The lunch counter is being cut down and will carry a glass top. White porcelain-topped stools will be installed.

Plate glass mirrors will be hung around the room, and as a finishing touch the whole interior is to be repainted and decorated. The large tables formerly used have been cut down to accommodate four people, and new two-party tables will be placed along the wall.

In all, Mr. Garvey plans to have one of the brightest and best equipped restaurants in this section of the state. He will make a specialty this season of catering to the tourist trade, which he believes will be the greatest in the history of the Brainerd lake region.

DEMPSEY A POPULAR HERO IN NEW YORK

By HENRY L. FARRELL,
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, May 11.—Jack Dempsey's protracted inactivity in the defense of the world's heavyweight championship apparently has not detracted from the popularity which he rather generously enjoys. He nearly stopped a Sunday ball game in New York recently when he came in late while the New York Giants and Philadelphia Phils were on the field. The crowd gave him an ovation that lasted until he had bowed several times. Dempsey may not be a great actor, but he is a good showman and that may have prompted him to come in late for a theatrical entrance.

Although there is a general opinion among boxing writers that most of Dempsey's utterances and activities are inspired by the desire for publicity, the public is still willing to accept him as a great champion, if the attitude of New York sportsmen can be taken as a general indication of sentiment.

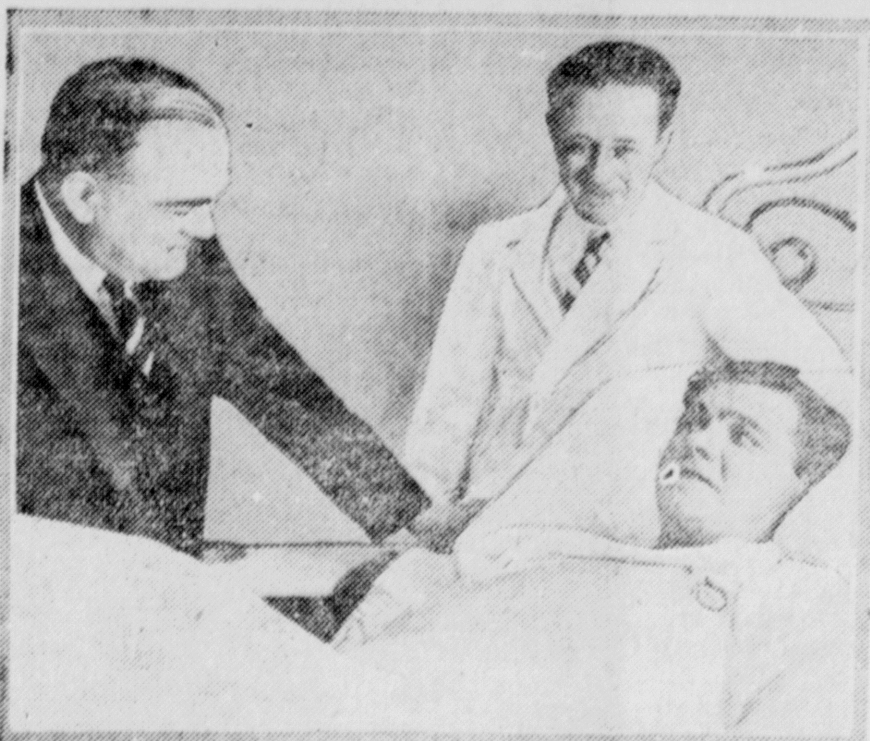

As a matter of fact, New York should be the one city where some feeling against Dempsey as the champion should be noticed, for Harry Wills is accepted as a New Yorker and there is the largest colony of negro residents in New York that can be found in any one city in the world. If there is any particular feeling that Dempsey is hiding his fear of Wills behind the color line, it should be expressed in New York.

The pleasing personality of Dempsey and his personal popularity probably have reacted against any feeling that Dempsey was falling down as a worthy heavyweight champion. Dempsey is still accepted as Dempsey, and it seems that he is not judged by the standard of an active champion.

Business men of the game said that Tex Rickard wouldn't draw enough money to pay Dempsey when he assumed obligations of over a half million dollars to promote the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. Boxing writers told the public that Carpentier didn't have a chance to win and if there had been any close supervision over the game as is now exercised by the Boxing Commission in New York, it is very likely that a permit would not have been granted for the match. Rickard not only drew enough customers to pay the fighters, but he had a good profit out of the $1,600,000 paid in at the gate after he had settled the bills for the erection of a huge stadium and the costs of the other incidentals of promotion. This was perhaps the best example of Barnum's business theory.

Dempsey's personal popularity is built upon solid grounds, because he had overcome a lot of prejudice at a time when prejudice was running high and proved to the public that he was worthy of some esteem. It is better perhaps as it is shown in his case, to start out with unpopularity and have sentiment switch to you.

Babe Ruth, in Hospital, Tells Business Manager How Much He Wants To Get Out and Help Yanks

"These have been the toughest three weeks of my life," Babe told Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, the day this photograph was taken in St. Vincent's Hospital, New York. The fact that the Yankees had won only four games this season and were far down the pennant ladder seemed to worry the home run swatter more than his own troubles. He said he hoped to be back in the line-up when the Yankees return to New York on May 26th.

SISLER AIMING AT HIGH RECORD FOR 1925 SEASON

(Duluth News Tribune)

St. Louis, May 11.—George Sisler, manager of the St. Louis Browns, not only has accomplished one of baseball's greatest "comebacks," but apparently is well on the road this year to one of his greatest seasons in baseball.

Forced out of the national pastime the whole of the 1923 season by an attack of sinus trouble which impaired his vision, and which interfered considerably with his play last season the "peerless" George this year seems destined to reach the highest pinnacle of baseball's supremacy if his performance thus far can be taken as a criterion.

Last winter when Sisler asserted emphatically that he expected to be as good as ever in 1925 baseball fans throughout the country wished him well but were frankly dubious. They apparently remembered his play last year when he faced pitchers with his head cocked on one side, and pushed feebly at pitches, seldom connecting solidly with the ball.

Although he did manage to eke out a batting average of .305, his all-around performance was not impressive, and many predicted that he never would be a great player again.

But this year it is another story. He has participated in 25 games, batting for an average of .419, several points better than he did at any time in his career. He has faced all kinds of pitching and has yet to participate in a game without obtaining one or more hits.

But his batting average does not tell the full tale of Sisler's remarkable play. Last year he was always "in the hole" to opposing pitchers but not so this year.

Any doubt as to Sisler's play, is promptly and unequivocally dispelled by the Browns' manager himself. He attributes his remarkable success to confidence. Every member of the Browns shows the same belief and each asserts that he is "the old George Sisler."

Wright's Unassisted Triple Play Sixth in Major League History

Pittsburgh, May 11.—The triple play, unassisted, made last Thursday by Glenn Wright, Pittsburgh's shortstop, in a game with St. Louis was the third of its kind in the National league in 50 years, the Gazette-Times sports department said after investigating the records. The American league also is credited with three such plays.

Outfielder Paul Hines of the old Providence, R. I. club, on May 8, 1878. Infielder Ernie Padgett of the Boston Nationals on October 6, 1923.

Shortstop Neal Ball of the Cleveland Americans in 1909.

Second Baseman William Wambagans of the Cleveland Americans in a world's series game with Brooklyn in 1920.

First Baseman George Burns of the Boston Americans in 1923.
